 The Underground Railroad, often remembered as being characterized by tunnels, dark of night escapes, coded language, and hidey-holes, was far more extensive and complex than these ideas have led us to believe. During significant pro-slavery sentiment, New York State was home to many abolitionists working to abolish the institution of enslavement in our state and nation and it was visited by many who had escaped enslavement and sought a life of freedom. Paul and Mary Liz Stewart, independent researchers and co-founders of Underground Railroad Education Center, will share a new interpretation of a very old story and explain the various initiatives in which the Underground Railroad Education Center is engaged in as it works to connect the public with this empowering local history and its relevance for us today.
